The Danger Signal.

The Richmond Item, an independent Republican paper, warns the Republicans not to take McKinley as the Republican candidate for president this year. It says:

"The Democrats are hoping—if not praying—that the Republicans will nominate McKinley for president this year. And that of itself should be a valuable pointer to the latter. It is a pretty good rule in politics to do the contrary of what the opposition want you to do. The New York World voices the significant Democratic estimation of the situation in the following language:

"The St. Louis convention will nominate McKinley. As his views upon monetary questions mean nothing definite, so its platform utterance is likely to mean nothing. There is hopeless division in the party on this vital question. It will pretty certainly find expression in meaningless equivocations, and the time has gone by when such can deceive or satisfy the men on either side. Now what, under these circumstances, are the Democrats going to do? They have their opportunity at last to return to the doctrines of Jefferson, Jackson, Benton and Tilden, and to achieve the old dominance which the party enjoyed under such leadership of honesty and courage. Will they see and seize the opportunity?

"Making due allowance for the fulsome praise of party saints to be expected from a Democratic organ, there is much force and sagacity in the above editorial. It shows that the Democrats are preparing to take advantage of any mistake the Republicans make either in their candidate or platform.

"The nomination of McKinley, who represents high tariff and nothing else, on a platform as uncertain on the money question as he is, would prove to be the weakest one that could be made. This does not mean that he is not by long odds the most popular among the Republican candidates, but it does mean that he would get the smallest vote of any of them as a candidate for president. The trouble with him is that many of those who are not enthusiastically for him are not for him at all—they would vote against him.

"There are enough low tariff, sound money Republicans, including the independents who usually vote the Republican ticket, to hold the balance of power between the two old parties, and these would vote the Democratic ticket, if that party follows the advice of the World and puts up a sound money candidate on a sound money, moderate tariff platform. Either Reed, Allison, Morton or Harrison could carry all the McKinley votes—they are all pledged to the principle of protection—and either would also carry the greater part of the independent low tariff sound money vote above referred to. They represent more than the tariff issue and represent a better phase of that than does McKinley.

"It would thus appear to be foolish to the point of absurdity for the Republicans to nominate such a man; for, in spite of a combination of favorable circumstances which now appears to make Republican success certain, the history of politics should convince them that such a course would be dangerous.

"The average citizen of the United States has a decided habit of doing his own thinking and voting, and as lightly as party lines now rest upon him, he has plenty of time to change his mind between the 10th of June and the first Tuesday of November. Many a fair prospect has been ruined in much less time; and if the Republicans are wise they will avoid the danger before it is too late."

Monte Carlo's gaming tables took in 18,000,000 francs last year, a reduction of more than a million francs over the previous year, and the dividend is only 165 francs per share. The loss is due to the luck of two or three plungers. A Russian army surgeon took away 2,126,000 francs and two South African mine speculators 325,000 francs between them. The directors intend to spend large sums of money to make Monte Carlo attractive to visitors for other reasons than gambling.

Tariff is in Politics to Stay.

An announcement comes from Detroit that it has been decided to hold a "political tariff convention" in that city next month. "It is proposed that a call therefor be issued by two national labor organizations, one national agricultural organization and fifteen commercial organizations."

"It has been decided," "it is proposed," by whom? All the information vouchsafed upon that point is contained in the statement that "the subjects proposed to be discussed are slated by Secretary Archer of the national tariff commission." Who is Archer and what is the national tariff commission? Of whom is that body composed and how did it come into existence? To these questions there is no answer.

We are told that the first subject to be discussed is "ways and means for taking the tariff questions out of politics and making it a business question." From this one may gather that the movement is in the interest of those beneficiaries of the protective tariff who would be delighted to get their great system of private enrichment through the agency of public taxation placed securely beyond the reach of the people. These patriots have enlisted Senator Cullom, the Illinois prohibitionists and, it would seem, some nonpolitical or semipolitical organizations. This Detroit convention evidently is projected by the same men as part of a plan of systematic agitation. The game seems to be to commit as many organizations as possible to their pretty scheme, so to be ready to spring it upon the country as soon as they secure another McKinley tariff or one still more to their liking, which they hope to do as a result of the elections next fall.

These plotters may as well understand at once that this thing cannot be done. If the proposal were merely to take out of politics questions as to the best methods of raising necessary revenue there would be some little sense in it. Such questions might possibly be left to a commission without detriment to public interests, though that is more than doubtful, for the mere raising of revenue is a public act for public purposes and is a proper subject of public discussion.

But the question of taxation for other than public purposes—for the benefit of individuals or selected branches of industry or classes or sections—in short, for protection—is in its very nature a political question. It is the question whether the government of the whole people shall exercise the taxing power for the benefit of a few of the people at the expense of the many. There ought not to be any question about it. The proposition that the taxing power should be exercised for no other than public purposes ought to be considered as axiomatic as any of the self-evident truths enunciated in the declaration of independence. But in fact the power is exercised for other purposes, and so long as that in the case the question will stay in politics.

And it will be a burning question. It will grow hotter and hotter until it is settled as it ought to be and as it would have been long ago but for the ingenuity of protectees in making gross and palpable wrong to appear right to multitudes whose clear thinking is no match for their well meaning. This question can no more be taken out of politics before it is settled rightly than the slavery question could be taken out of politics. It is essentially a question of freedom and justice and it will stay in politics and burr deeper and deeper until freedom and justice are established on a foundation that cannot be shaken.

If you eat what you like, and digest it, you will surely be strong and healthy. HIS LEG IS PULLED.

That Is How a Southern Congressman Regards His Lot.

"Some people may think that a congressman saves a pile of money out of his salary," said a well-known southern congressman, who was talking to a Washington Star reporter on the vicissitudes of running for office, and especially for congress, "but a man has to be a small walking bank to accommodate the large number of his 'friends' and supporters who need a little money for some urgent matter. In my state we have to make campaigns and appear before the people at meetings. Well, I have never attended a meeting but that I did not have some kind of a subscription poked into my face. Somebody wants something for a church and for missionary purposes or for helping some fellow who has been burned out."

"You can't avoid subscribing, and have to head the list with the largest sum. Then about the time you think you are through with having your leg pulled some lazy fellow will walk up and say: 'How do, general? I had ter quit my work ter come out and hear you terday, and I think yer mout giv' me a dollar.' While you have the greatest contempt for the man, you give him the dollar."

"When you leave the meeting you are out anywhere from $20 to $50. These are just a few instances of what a candidate has to spend money for. After he gets through the campaign and is elected he has to furnish every dead beat from his district who should happen to come to Washington with money. I've actually given them money and railroad tickets to get home and have them go back and work against me."

IRONY OF FATE.

It Pursues Two Eminent Respectable Ladies Who Could Not Agree.

Not long ago there were two ladies stopping at the same boarding house. They were single ladies, be it said, and both highly respectable. But for some reason, says the Minneapolis Times, known only to themselves, they "couldn't get along," and matters went between them from bad to worse till they "quit speaking."

They both got tired, of course, living in the same house with a mortal enemy, and finally both determined to move. Arrangements were made, and, as luck would have it, both moved the same day. Lady No. 1 loaded up her household goods in the morning, and in the afternoon a dray pulled up and carried away the trunk, shawls, and other effects of lady No. 2.

Lady No. 2 was just composing herself to view the surroundings of her new lodging place, when a wagon stopped at the front door and began to unload a collection of articles unmistakably feminine. She sized up the trunk and went downstairs, filled with a horrible suspicion, to interview the landlady.

Her suspicions were true. They had moved into the same house. Of course, they should have made up their differences and lived in peace and charity ever after. But they did not. Lady No. 2 never got her trunk inside of the house.

DEAF MUTES DANCE.

A Jumping Mummy on the Piano Keeps the Step for Them.

A social club of deaf mutes exists in Warsaw since 1883, and as there are a large number of persons thus afflicted in the capital of Russian Poland, the club is doing very well. During the last week of carnival the club arranged a ball, and in order to enable the member to dance to the music in time, a very curious plan was adopted, which proved quite efficient. A large paper doll was rigged up on the piano, and the player, also a deaf mute, who furnished the music, which, of course, could not be heard by the members of the club, used a pedal to make the paper figure move up and down in time with the piece played. A large sign alongside announced the character of the dance, and thus it became possible for the deaf mutes to enjoy the dances as if they were not afflicted with their organic shortcomings. Besides that, they were spared the agony of those who could hear, for some wag had tampered with the piano, which was rightfully out of tune, even the player never noticing that fact. The deaf mutes danced into the early morning hours and unanimously voted the entertainment a magnificent success.

DEAD, YET ALIVE.

An Interesting Enoch Arden Case in an English Court.

A curious Enoch Arden case, in which the lord justice of appeal had to intervene in order to bring a man to life again legally, has just been decided in England. Forty-two years ago a woman married a sailor in the British navy, who deserted, went to the United States and was not heard of again for 36 years. Six years after his disappearance she married another man, with whom she lived for 15 years, but from whom she at last obtained a judicial separation and alimony in 1892. The second husband pleaded that his marriage was null, as her first husband was alive at the time, but the jury in the divorce court found that the man was dead. Last year husband No. 2 discovered husband No. 1, brought suit again and produced him in court, where he was fully identified, but the judge held that as a jury had declared he was dead, he could not admit that he was alive and dismissed the suit. The appellate judges seem to be of his opinion, for they refused to allow the appeal and annul the marriage on the ground of the man's being alive till the second husband had given security that he would pay the woman an allowance.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

Reasonable Weather Throughout the Country Improves Trade.

New York, April 25.—R. G. Dun & Co., in their weekly review of trade, say:

"Business has been favored by seasonable weather and the distribution of products has made fair progress, not yet reducing retail or wholesale stocks far enough, however, to materially improve the position of industries. Money markets have grown more favorable, as well as the state of foreign commerce, and until an apparently groundless revival of discussion about the Venezuela difficulty there was a brighter prospect of European investments here. The belief that agitation for cheap money will be permanently laid at rest this year is gaining ground, and in financial quarters causes more confidence for the future. Prices of commodities are on the whole lower than ever before, having declined about two per cent. since April 1 and 17 per cent. since July 1890, or October 1892. The fall in manufactured products is a little less than it was April 1, but in farm products greater.

"Failures for the week have been 238 in the United States, against 290 last year, and 44 in Canada, against 37 last year."

Bradstreet's says:

"The feeling is more hopeful at many trade centers, owing to continued improvement of demand in retail lines, better weather, generally favorable crop prospects and the activity which naturally follows renewed building operations, distribution of implements and farm supplies and attendant activity. More favorable reports from commercial travelers are coming from those representing Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha and Milwaukee houses. Moderate improvement is shown at a few other western centers, but at most of the larger distributing points throughout the country the movement of merchandise, on the whole, shows no material change."

SWEPT BY FIRE.

Cripple Creek, Colorado's Famous Mining Town, Suffers Heavily.

Cripple Creek, Col., April 27.—With the aid of dynamite and giant powder a fire which started at one o'clock p. m. Saturday, and which threatened to wipe out of existence the town of Cripple Creek, was overcome, but not before at least a million dollars' damage had been sustained by the town. The buildings occupying eight blocks of street, together with their contents, were utterly destroyed. One hundred and fifty business houses, the post office and a bank are in ashes. Five or six hundred persons will have to find new homes.

Positive evidence has been secured to prove that the fire was the work of an incendiary for the purpose of making a raid on the First national bank, which now appears to have had on deposit something over $100,000 on account of the near approach of pay day at the leading mines.

DISASTER IN A MINE.

Sixty-Seven Men Buried Alive and Nearly All Are Probably Dead.

El Paso, Tex., April 27.—News has reached here of a horrible catastrophe at the Santa Eulalia mines, near Chihuahua, Mexico, Thursday night when it caved in, burying alive 67 of the men, all of whom were Mexicans. Gov. Ahumada is on the ground with a large force of men working to recover the buried. Thirty-seven men have been recovered, ten dead, seven dying and 20 fatally hurt. There are 30 men still in the ruins and no hope is entertained of recovering them alive.

INDIANA STATE NEWS.

The following postmasters were appointed a few days ago: Thomas W. Shoulters, Arthur, Pike county, vice Mrs. Belle Thompson, resigned, and Isaac N. Donez, Plummer, Green county, vice Shannon E. Poulton, resigned.

At Mt. Vernon, a west-bound freight on the Louisville & Nashville ran into the rear end of a passenger train on the Evansville & Terre Haute railroad the other night, killing brakemen W. E. Driscoll and F. R. Thompson, and seriously injuring Charles Finney, Jacob Lamb, Wm. Turner and Pat Maroney, all railroaders. No passengers were injured.

The conference of Indiana bituminous miners and operators agreed to disagree, and there will be a strike May 1. Both sides believing they could not reach an agreement, decided to hold the conference Thursday and not wait until Friday, when two of the operators' committee could not get there. In the morning the men asked for an advance from 60 to 66 cents, which was refused, the operators saying they would pay no more than 55 cents. The miners committee reported to their full convention at noon and Thursday afternoon offered to sign a contract for 61 cents. This they said would be in accord with the Ohio price and a recognition of the old nine cent differential under the Pittsburgh scale. The operators insisted that they now had to compete with the eastern Illinois or Danville district where not better than 55 cents was paid. Then the adjournment was had and both sides expect nothing less than a month's idleness.

POSTMASTERS were appointed in Indiana as follows a few days since: John E. Whitlow, Gosburg, Morgan county, vice John Welsner, deceased; Mary Geddes, New Paris, vice Thomas I. Estlick, resigned, and Henry Garbinck, Southwest, vice Jonas Culpy, resigned, both in Elkhart county.

A Commendable Benevolence.

Beginning on Monday next a day nursery will be established in Greencastle, at the residence of Mr. James Taylor, on East Seminary street. The object is to care for and nourish, and give attention to the culture of the babies and young children of parents who, by reason of their avocations in life, cannot give their little ones the attention they desire they should have. Mr. James Taylor has donated the use of his place and the management of the nursery devolves on the Board of Managers, which consists of Mrs. J. H. Hollingsworth, Mrs. J. R. Miller, Mrs. A. T. Kelley, Mrs. H. C. Allen, Mrs. Silas A. Hays and Miss E. Jean Nelson, with Miss Lizzie Ames as President. The business office of the Board is to be located at the residence of Mr. Taylor, and one or more of the ladies will be there to give personal attention to the management at all times, and this fact gives earnest that the nursery will be efficiently and carefully looked after, and it will doubtless prove a great blessing to many parents and children.

In connection with this day nursery the managers will establish an intelligence office for the purpose of securing work for the unemployed and supplying labor to those who wish to employ it.

The scheme, in its entirety, is a worthy one, and we hope to see it prove a great success and a great blessing to all concerned.

As per promise made by one of Greencastle's practitioners at the bar last year, he forwarded to a brother attorney resident at Brazil who has recently perfected a palatial residence, a collection of trees, vines, etc., to beautify and fructify his yard. When they arrived at Brazil they were a joy to the who received, and he immediately secured a colored citizen, his son, and a hired man to dig the holes and set out the donation under his personal supervision, his wife not being present. When the lady came home the husband beamed upon her with smiles, and said: "I received a present from Greencastle to-day; come out and see it. I planted the grapes where we expect to build the arbor, I put out the plums where we will put the chicken yard; and put the rose bushes out on the front lawn." The wife followed him over the premises to see the result of his handiwork, and when the lawn and rose bushes were reached she laughed loud and long. The head of the house asked "why this levity," when she exclaimed, "Why these rose bushes are raspberries," and laughed more heartily than ever, but he never smiled a smile; he is somewhat diffident in referring to the matter, but insists that the front yard is the place for raspberries, because they can sit on the front porch and keep the boys from stealing the berries.

A charming afternoon reception was given by Mrs. J. B. DeMotte, Mrs. Washburn and Mrs. Case, on last Wednesday. The refreshments were delicious and daintily served, and the guests pronounce the afternoon one of unusual pleasure and enjoyment.

The only other business of importance was the adoption of the claim ordinance.

On Tuesday night a burglar bold forced an entrance into the residence of J. D. AN EVEN THING.

A Duel in a Dark Room—Both Men Proved Cowards.

It has been said that all men are cowards in the dark, and there is doubtless some truth in the statement. A correspondent of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat cites an instance in illustration. Two officers of the British army in India had a difficulty which resulted in a duel.

The colonel, the challenged party, was an old campaigner who had won his laurels in the Crimea and was a most gallant soldier. The choice of weapons being his, he named pistols, and elected that the affair should occur in a dark room.

We secured a room 20 feet square, says the narrator of the incident, closed every crevice that would admit light, placed our men in corners diagonally opposite, and withdrew.

Each man was provided with three charges, and when these were exhausted we rushed in to gather up the mutilated remains.

Each man stood erect and soldierlike in his corner, untouched; but directly behind the officer who had given the challenge were three bullet holes made by the colonel's pistol.

"How is this?" said a grizzled major. "Had you been standing here when those shots were fired, you would have been killed."

The culprit was forced to admit that he had dropped to one knee.

"You are a coward, sir, and unfit for the company of soldiers and gentlemen!" cried the major.

"Hold on, major!" said the colonel. "It is a stand-off. While he was on his knees in one corner, I was on my stomach in the other."

DeMotte—the former returns to Clinton, and the latter to her home at Terre Haute, and will soon leave for Bryn Mawr to make it their place of residence.
